Torrance Talent Pleases Women's Club Gathering

Torrance talent presented the program at the Women's club Wednesday afternoon. Most of the numbers were given by pupils of the high school. The glee clubs gave several numbers.

Miss Johanna Neelands and Miss Thelma Price gave a Topsy and Eva sketch. Miss Nyla Tansey was the accompanist. Dallas Danford gave two trumpet numbers, accompanied at the piano by his mother, Mrs. L. G. Danford. Jack Reeve, accompanied at the piano by his sister, Miss Helen Reeve, gave a saxophone number. Miss Dorothy Barrett with Miss Thelma Price at the piano, gave two whistling numbers. Mrs. R. A. Young, a new member of the club, gave two readings.

Four young ladies from the high school presented a one act play entitled "Mrs. Ockie's Telephone." The plot was concerned with the mixup of telephone numbers with Miss Marian Vaitas as Mrs. Ockie; Miss Nyla Tansey, as Miss Constance; Miss Lois Zuber, as Mary, the Irish cook; and Miss Mary Feisel, as Emma, the German maid. All of the parts were well played. Mary the cook and Emma the maid caused great gusts of merriment whenever they appeared.

Mrs. Parks gave a parliamentary drill, and also reported on the dinner given to the Harbor District Chamber of Commerce and the dinner given by the Junior Auxiliary to the Columbia Steel men. Both of these dinners were a great success.

Mrs. J. N. Allen gave a report on the meeting of January 6th, which report appeared in a previous issue.

Mrs. S. C. Collins, chairman of co-operation with ex-service men, reported on her work during the holidays. Fifty-five postal cards were sent in the name of the club to the boys who had been moved from Compton to Palo Alto. The jellies and jams that were collected to send to the boys at Palo Alto were not needed there and Mrs. Collins sent them to the Home for Veterans' Children at Burbank, as instructed by the club. Mrs. Collins and her son, Douglas, drove to the home on Christmas day taking with them about fifty jars of jelly, jams and fruit.

Mrs. Collins reported that there were two mothers and several fathers at the home enjoying the day with their children, as the children were not allowed to leave the home during the holidays on account of contagious diseases. Mrs. Collins reported that ten cakes and fifteen pounds of candy had been sent to the boys at Palo Alto.

Mrs. Stroh Speaks
The luncheon speaker was Mrs. Harry Stroh, district program chairman, who discussed "The Creative Power of Thought."

Mrs. Fanny Engle, representing the Marionettes, which the club is arranging to show on Feb. 9 explained them to the club and said that "Cinderella" and Anderson's story of the Nightingale would be the stories presented. The figures used in the Nightingale are hand carved by Richard Earle, grandson of a dearly loved member of the club, Mrs. Nettie Steinhaber, chairman of the Garden section.

Beautiful roses from the home of Mrs. Adams, sister of Mrs. Higginson, chairman of the January committee, formed the table decorations. The delicious luncheon on Wednesday was donated to the club by the January committee.

Two old members of the club who were joyfully welcomed were Mrs. Janet Woodington who came from Mentone to visit her husband at the hospital and Mrs. Clayton Hall, who is now living in New Mexico.

TOWNE TALKS

"Just for Fun"

By RAS BERRY

I guess they wasn't many people in church Sunday on acct. of everybody and his bro. and sister being up in the mts. in the snow.

And this is a little something to let the world know how a man gets paid for fishing on Sunday.

I was up in the mts. to see the snow and me and my boy we run into a club where they is a sign calling this place the angler's paradise. So it being Sunday we went in and a man give us two poles and a creel and a towel to wipe fish slime off your hands if any and they was a pool alive with trout and we went to it.

Well at first them fish didn't do so well and I was about ready to quit when Bill he ketches three in a row and then I ketches two.

By this time the boss she got tired of watching us fish and she went away and pretty soon she come back and we has ketches in about 10 trouts and she says in a whisper you has better quit because it will be pretty expensive and I didn't even hear her because I had a nibble just then.

So she went away again and every few minutes she would come back and say something about the cost but every time I had a nibble or a strike and didn't hear her.

Well we ketches so many middle size trouts that we thought we was pretty good and so we graduated up to the pool where the big ones live and dog-gone if Bill didn't ketch three big boys in a row and then I caught a couple and then the boss she comes up again and whisper some economics in my ear and I pointed to a sign which says you could fish for a dollar and then I had a strike and turned my attention to somewhere else besides her and so she went away again.

We fished 5 hrs. altogether and didn't quit until we had 30 trouts, 23 middle size ones and seven big babies and I was pretty proud and so was Bill and we took the fish to the house and he counted them up and he says thirteen dollars please and I says "wait a great big guy stepped up and he looked down at me and he says that is the nicest mess of trout that was ever ketches at this here club how did you manage to do it Mr. Kingsley and I says well I am a pretty cagy fisher and he says you ketches such a nice mess and I says well you have got to know your stuff to ketch trouts and he says well you sure know yours and so I paid him the 13 berries and went up to our cabin and I thought well I won't tell the boss what these here fish cost because she wouldn't understand and I hadn't no sooner got into the cabin than she looked at a cover on the box in which the trouts was packed and the price of the mess was right on the box and she says well I could of had a new hat and a dandy one for 13 dollars and I says yes but you couldn't of had 30 trouts. And so it went until late that night.

Them trouts in these here clubs is trained. I know it now. First you go to a pool filled with middle size ones and they have got them trout trained so only the little bit of ones bite at first but you can see bigger ones in there and so you keep on casting and just when you are about to leave and say well I guess I'll quit that is the signal for the big ones and they strike and you stay on and when you are about to quit again they strike every time you cast in and who would quit then no matter what it costs especially when they don't tell you the price before you start to fish.

Well then the high school fish in the big pool is even smarter and better trained being older and wiser. You go to fish for them and they don't even smell of the fly but if you look close you can see them watching you out of one eye and when they see a look of disinterest coming over your face they encourage you with a nibble and of course you stay. They strike only so often so your interest is maintained at a high pitch and the last thing in your mind is cost because you ain't got room in your head for anything but ketching that great big one that is jollying around your fly.

And so you stay on and on and on—we stayed five hours—and didn't even eat no noon meal. They is sure educated fish.

Well them trout club owners has got to get all they can from every fisher the first time he fishes in their pools. Because they won't never have anyone for a customer the second time.

They is one thing I want to do however. I want to find out who trains them trouts. I would take him on at a big salary to educate gold fish. He could make gold fish sing like canary birds.

I don't feel no sympathy for them trout in them pools. The poor fish is on the other end of the pole.

Charles Mallory of Sioux Falls, Iowa, is a guest of his son Waldo Mallory of Pennsylvania avenue. The elder Mallory came here from Fresno, where his father is seriously ill. Mr. Mallory is a brother of Mrs. William Gasser of Narbonne avenue.

Keystone Notes

Mr. Lloyd Berkey of Ellensburg, Washington was a recent visitor of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Tipton of Amella street.

Some of the ladies of the Carson St. Parent-Teachers' Association met at the Home Economics building on Tuesday and served luncheon of soup, sandwiches, and cake to the children, the proceeds to go into the student body fund. A total of $13.75 was realized. Another luncheon will be served Friday, January 27, under the supervision of Miss Crimmins, cooking teacher. The girls in the cooking classes will make the soup and furnish the sandwiches and the teachers will furnish the cake and the proceeds will be used by the girls to get curtains for the Home Economics building.

The Misses Estella and Maxine Harper of Wilmington were guests of Miss Mozelle Cowan at her home on Amella street.

Everybody will be welcome at the Keystone Baptist church Friday evening, Jan. 27, when a musical program will be presented by the Torrance Baptist church.
